

PERMANENT MISSION OF THE PRINCIPALITY OF LIECHTENSTEIN
TO THE UNITED NATIONS
NEW YORK

NEW YORK, 23 FEBRUARY 2012
SECURITY COUNCIL – OPEN DEBATE
WOMEN PEACE AND SECURITY
STATEMENT BY SWEN DORNIG, SECOND SECRETARY

Mr. President,

At the outset, let me join others in welcoming the report of the Secretary-General on conflict-related sexual violence, which for the first time informs us of the dire situation regarding the use of sexual violence as a method of warfare in country-specific situations. Let me also welcome the dedication with which the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on conflict-related sexual violence, Ms. Margot Wallström, and her team have operationalized and implemented important obligations deriving from resolutions 1820, 1888 and 1960. We are pleased to see that the monitoring, analysis and reporting arrangements on conflict-related sexual violence are now included in the mandates of various UN Missions, and that the terms of reference of the Women Protection Advisers have been agreed upon.

Mr. President,

Sexual violence is not only used as method of warfare during armed conflict: It's also used as a means to surreptitiously continue conflicts after the guns have gone silent. Sexual violence can be an important indicator in determining when conflicts might turn violent, or when a conflict relapses into violence. To fulfill its mandate towards conflict prevention, it is therefore imperative that the Council continues to receive information on sexual violence, including on situations of concern that are not on its agenda.

Mr. President,

Sexual violence not only attacks the dignity and the body of the victim, but it tears at the fundamental social fabric of the community. To build sustainable peace, sexual violence must be addressed throughout all stages of conflict resolution processes, starting with ceasefire agreements, and the presence of adequate gender expertise at the peace table. When provisions on sexual violence are not part of ceasefire agreements, such violence can be used to, in effect, continue acts of war, thereby undermining efforts to reduce violence and leading to a cycle of vengeance. Moreover, research shows that when sexual violence is not addressed in early stages of mediation efforts, the issue is likely to be ignored throughout later efforts to create and maintain peace. Hence, we welcome the work of DPA to produce guidance for mediators on addressing conflict-related sexual violence in mediation processes and throughout conflict resolution efforts. In this context, it is worthwhile to recall that United Nations-endorsed peace agreements can never promise amnesties for genocide, war crimes, crimes against humanity or gross violations of human rights. The Rome Statute of the ICC has significantly advanced international law by including sexual violence in the definition of crimes, in particular as a crime against humanity. The ICC therefore represents an important mechanism in the fight against conflict-related sexual violence. We call on the Council to use all means at its disposal to strengthen the fight against impunity for those violations by making better use of targeted measures, including sanctions and referrals to the ICC. In addition to collecting information on trends and perpetrators of conflict-related sexual violence, we must simultaneously ensure that support services for victims are sufficiently funded. My delegation has therefore pledged to continue its financial support for the ICC Trust Fund for Victims, which adopts a gender-based perspective across all programming and specifically aims to assist victims of all forms of sexual and gender-based violence. The Trust Fund provides direct assistance to victims and thus has an immediate impact on the ground.

Mr. President,

As a member of the S5 Group my delegation is a longstanding supporter of the consistent mainstreaming of the Council's thematic agenda into its country-specific work. To support the Council's efforts in mainstreaming its thematic agenda on Women, Peace and Security, my delegation organized a workshop, from 28 to 30 January 2012 in Schaan/Liechtenstein, hosted by H.E. Foreign Minister Aurelia Frick, on the implementation of the WPS agenda in Afghanistan. The workshop has been organized in close partnership with the Liechtenstein Institute on Self-Determination at Princeton University (LISD) and was supported by the delegations of Afghanistan and Germany. Since the findings and recommendations are related to today's consideration, allow me to remind the Council of the outcome report of this workshop. We believe that the inclusion of some of the recommendations within the renewed mandate of the UN-Mission in Afghanistan (UNAMA) would lead to an increased participation of women in peace processes, as well as more reliable information with regard to the work of the SRSG on conflict-related sexual violence.

I thank you.
